

Regional Management-Intensive Grazing Schools

2013 SW Missouri

Regional Grazing Schools Schedule:

What is a Management Intensive Grazing System?

Also known as rotational grazing management. A system where grazing is managed for both the benefit of the livestock and forage. Livestock graze in each pasture long enough to harvest the forage, but removed before too much leaf area is consumed. A basic system may have four or five pastures, while a more management intensive system will have eight to ten pastures

How do you sign up?

Contact the person in charge of the school of your choice or contact your local NRCS or Soil & Water Conservation District. If you plan on attending, you need to hurry and get your name on the list because seating is limited and the schools fill up fast.

Note: This listing of school covers schools from Marshfield, Missouri south to the Arkansas line and west to the Kansas line. Other schools are planned to the north and east of this region.

Why should you attend one of these schools?

The single most important management factor in determining the profitability of a livestock operation is keeping feed cost low. So why buy it when you can grow high quality feed yourself through a Management-Intensive grazing (MIG) system?

Cost control, not the amount of production, separates profitable from unprofitable operations. Through a MIG system you can keep your cost down and production in most cases will increase, all while helping out the environment.

In addition to the profits to your pocket book and the environment you may be eligible to receive cost share to help establish your MIG system. Attendance at a grazing school is one requirement to be eligible for state cost share programs.

So come to a Management Intensive Grazing School where you can learn about the fundamentals of a MIG systems so you can improve your profitability and the environment.
